Democratic Ticket in All but Southern States Swamped by Popular Repudiation of President's Policies and League of Nations, Only Kentucky Remaining Doubtful-G. O. P. Majority in Senate to Be From Six to Eight.

NEW YORK .- Chairman George White, of the Democratic National Committee, has conceded Harding's election.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The most stupendous political victory in American history was won today by the Republican national ticket when Senator Warren G. Harding was swept into the Presidency by a popular plurality far beyond the high mark established by Theodore Roosevelt in his memorable 1904 triumph over Alton B. Parker.

Incomplete returns, but absolutely convincing, indicate that Gov. James M. Cox has suffered a defeat more crushing than even the most sanguine Republican prophet had predicted. Aside from the ten States of the Solid South with 114 electoral votes and possibly Kentucky and Maryland, the Democratic ticket appeared to have been buried under an overwhelming landslide that erased the word "doubtful" from the political lexicon and restored to the G. O. P. a dozen or more States that had swung to Wilson in the 1916 overturn.

Wilson Repudation Emphatic.

The nation not alone heeded Senator Harding's plea for an emphatic repudiation of the Wilson league of nations and unmistakable condemnation of the Administration's policies, but likewise answered his demand for a Republican Congress to carry out his policies. In the next Senate the Republicans will have, according to indiations tonight, a majority of from six to eight and in the House of Representatives, a lead of nearly 70. By 10 p. m., there were enough returns in hand to make Senator Harding's election a certainty, regardless of the way the remainder
